PRESENCE OF MIND. & Story of How Coolness Saved a

Pante. "The presence of mind displayed by the members of a small theatrical troups who were playing in a frame building in one of the mining towns of Colorado last winter, struck me as being almost heroic," said Clement Sawyer of Cincinnati, "I had struck the town on business and to pass away an hour in the evening had looked into the little hall to see a traveling com-oany give a representation of "The Danitea" The performance was by no means bad and I was getting quite Interested in the adventures of the beroine, when all at once I noticed the stage manager beckon the star to the screens which served as wings. He whispered something hurriedly and a second later the star fell on the stage as though in a faint. The curtain was rung down and the stage manager, coming to the front, stated that pwing to the sudden and dangerous illness of the leading actor the performance could not go on. A free entertainment would be given the foltowing evening to make up for the shortening of the play. The audience began to file out quietly and the hall was nearly half empty when a burst of fire came through the curtain. The shanty, for it was little more, had caught fire behind the scenes and the stage manager's idea was to get out the bulk of the audience before a panic set in. He succeeded so well that, although, of course, the building was burned to the ground, no one was hurt and the men who had been cheering the actors a few minutes before helped to save the adjoining

Thrills With the Aid of a Light Pole

and Trolley Track. Brooklyn boys have a new amusement. One boy can enjoy the sport all by himself or several youngsters may take part in the fun at the same time. When a solo part is played the lad, having fastened the wire about one of the Edison electric illuminating poles, takes an end in one hand and places his disengaged hand upon a trolley track. So he establishes a circuit and experiences a slight electric shock. When several boys wish to be shocked at the same time, they simply join hands and one touches the pole and the other the track, and in that way all are more or less shocked.

"I understand how the lads get the electricity," said W. H. Freeman, acting secretary of the Edison company. The trolley car tracks are all grounded, and the boys, by making a elrenit with our pillars, which of course are of metal, get a slight part of the current. Our pole is not responsible for this state of things, however There is a big policeman in that district who does not believe the current is slight. He tried it the other evening, and when he experienced the shock he jumped three feet into the air and awakened the echoes in the avenue with his cries.

SENTIMENT AND ACTION.

She Took Him Into Camp by Reminding Him of His Duty.

He was a nice fellow and she was a nice girl; he was 35 and she 28, and the margin of procrastination was narrowing. He didn't seem to notice it, but she did; women are always more acute in such matters than men are; why they are has never been accurately and satisfactorily de-termined. It was about the eighteen hundredth gloaming they had watched the purple shadows and so-forth in and still he had not hit the

"I think so much of you," he said tenderly. "Yes?" questioningly.

"Yes, I think of you always." She shook her head impatiently, "Don't you like for me to?" he que-

"No. I don't," she responded in a petulant mood. He tried to take her hand.

"Why don't you?" he asked, with a tremulous touch of fear in his voice. She braced up nobly.

"Because," she said, "it is not the man who thinks, but the man who acts, that wins victories." When he was 35 and she 29 they were Mr. and Mrs.

Not a Difficult Matter. A certain judge who is blessed with a tremendous head of hair, which is generally in a state of wild disorder, was questioning a youthful witness, to make sure that he comprehended the character and importance of the oath he was about to take. "Boy," he said, with his severest and most magisterial manner, "do you feel sure that you could identify me after six months? Now be careful. Think before you speak." "Well, your honor," replied the boy after a prolonged survey of the judge's portly figure and rugged features, "I ain't sure, but I think I could if you wasn't to comb your hair."
